Schwarzkopf Foundation, the European Youth Parliament and TUI Foundation launch EU Crash Courses in the Netherlands and Spain

The project Understanding Europe was launched in the Netherlands and Spain in September. The first courses will be held from this week and next week. At TUI Nederland's head office in The Hague, the team of young trainers was familiarised with its future tasks in the framework of the project.

Experiencing Europe, Understanding Europe – this is the motto of the project, designed for young trainers to enable schoolchildren to gain a fundamental understanding of how European politics work in four-hour EU Crash Courses. These courses are now also offered in the Netherlands and Spain. The trainers are familiarised with the teaching materials and varied teaching methods under the motto “Train the trainers”. For the courses now run in the Netherlands, they are supported by trainers from Berlin and North Rhine Westphalia, who have already run the project several times, and the Schwarzkopf Foundation team. Anne Rolvering, Executive Director at Schwarzkopf Foundation, said: “Our trainers bring European topics into the classroom based on a peer education method. We want pupils to experience and discuss Europe as a place for participation.”

The new trainers have tackled their new task with enthusiasm, both in Majorca and The Hague, as Judlit Lladós, Spanish participant in the project, has confirmed: “My main motivation is to share my knowledge of Europe with other young Europeans, as they are the EU's future voters and should therefore know what they are voting on. That is why I consider it to be very important to create an awareness of the role of Europe and emphasize our remarkable privilege of living in a peaceful order.”

“Understanding Europe is a project that is more important and challenging now than ever before,” commented Thomas Ellerbeck, Chairman of the TUI Foundation's Board of Trustees, on a visit to The Hague. “TUI Foundation has aligned its programme to young Europeans. We believe that it is worthwhile to re-emphasize and further develop the idea of a common European order of peace and freedom, pursued at the time when Europe was founded. After all, Europe goes far beyond cents and euros. Due to the great success of the Understanding Europe programme in Germany, time has come to roll these courses out to other European countries.

Understanding Europe is a project run by the Schwarzkopf Foundation and the European Youth Parliament (EYP) in the Netherlands and Spain in cooperation with the TUI Foundation. Understanding Europe has been run in North Rhine Westphalia since 2009 with the support of the Mercator Foundation, in Berlin and Brandenburg since 2012, and on an international level since 2014. The EYP is a unique European education programme motivating young people to discuss current European topics and helping them to experience peaceful intercultural dialogue. The Berlin-based Schwarzkopf Foundation is the EYP's international umbrella organisation.

The TUI Foundation supports and organises projects on “Young People in Europe,” promoting education, training, tolerance and capability for dialogue as well as equality of opportunity for young people in the European Union.
